In the Russian Federation they are studying the use of dividends for investments by energy companies with state participation

The Ministry of Energy of the Russian Federation is preparing decisions on some large energy companies with state participation on the use of their dividend flow for investments. This was stated by Deputy Minister of Energy Evgeniy Grabchak at a meeting of the Council on Gasification of the Subjects of the Russian Federation under the Federation Council.

"We are already making such decisions for some companies, at least with state participation, or they are being prepared - this is the use of the dividend flow to investment sources. For large companies, we understand that this can be," he said. This measure is proposed by the Ministry of Energy as one of the ways to find investments in the electric power industry for development of the general scheme of power supply until 2042.
