Rosseti wants to ease the financing of preferential grid connections

According to Kommersant, Rosseti (MOEX: FEES) has made a new attempt to reduce the burden of responsibility for preferential grid connections. The state holding company proposes that regulators take into account the cost of the service in advance based on applications, rather than paying upon completion. Currently, this difference is often not taken into account in the tariff. Until then, the state holding company asks to ease administrative liability measures for failure to meet connection deadlines.
