More than 230 thousand residents of the Central District were left without power due to bad weather

Rosseti Centre's power engineers are eliminating the consequences of bad weather in the regions of the Central Federal District, the company's Telegram channel reports, the bad weather disrupted the power supply to more than 4 thousand villages and more than 230 thousand residents. Heavy rains passed through the Central Federal District, turning into sleet, snow stuck to power lines, and wind speeds reached 22-27 metres per second during gusts. This caused damage to power equipment and local temporary power outages, with the Tula, Ryazan, Kursk and Voronezh regions suffering the most, the company noted.
