The State Duma Committee approved special rules for the energy sector under special regimes

The State Duma Committee on Energy proposed that the parliament consider in the first reading at its meeting on Tuesday a bill that empowers the government to establish the specifics of applying laws on electric power, heat supply, and housing legislation during the period of introduction of special regimes.

The Committee proposes to finalize the bill and give the government the right to establish special rules in the electric power sector as part of approving investment programs and new connection to electric grids during the period of special regimes.
