Ministry of Energy: authorities may determine companies responsible for new generation in the south of the Russian Federation

The department noted that the issue of covering the projected deficits in the south requires prompt decisions.

Applications for a competitive selection for construction of new generation in the energy system of southern Russia did not pass it due to exceeding the maximum cost of projects. The Ministry of Energy is studying the possibility of determining the generating companies responsible for the construction and will report this to the government, the press service of the ministry told TASS. The possibility of quickly increasing the capacity of the generation already operating in the region is also being discussed.
