Russian Ministry of Energy sees an opportunity to adjust investment programs in the electric power industry

The Russian Ministry of Energy expects adjustments to the investment programs of regulated companies in the energy sector against the backdrop of current economic conditions, Deputy Minister of Energy Evgeniy Grabchak told journalists on the sidelines of the RREDA conference.

"There are no applications (from companies yet - IF). But we objectively understand that the current rate and the need to service the debt will lead to the fact that investment programs will have to be adjusted. In what volumes and when - it is not yet clear," he answered a corresponding question. Rosseti, RusHydro, Rosatom - those who are regulated by us," Deputy Minister clarified, speaking about the companies that this may affect.
